Introduction

The history of Fish and me began with a small 80L Jebo Tank in which I kept a Ghost Fish and few Small Chichlids. My Unfortunate luck with Chichlid breeding led to upgrading my Jebo tank to a 3 x 18 x 14 which was a breeding ground for Chichlids. Every time I would go into the aquarium shop to buy stock I was amazed at the Marine section but was always put off by the time and dedication that was involved in maintaining such a tank. After growing tired of cleaning algae and hundreds of baby fish out of the tank, I decided to give Marine a go. A close mate had already taken the plunge and gave me some of his hand-me-downs to make the initial cost not so painful. My first tank was a 4 x 18 x 16 sumplex pain!

Once I started I couldn't but help wanting more space and more equipment. 16 months into my 4 x 18 x 16 I decided to upgrade to my current 4 x 2 x 2 which has been running for close to 2 years now.

Current Setup

With cost always a concern, I decided to upgrade to a 4 x 2 x 2 and build my own stand and hood and sump from my old 3 foot Chichlid tank.

With a whole bunch of hints from RTAW and great advice from my LFS, I went about setting up my current tank with centre overflow. There's nothing too flash about my tank, single Durso with split return. It has never missed a beat besides having a snail shell stuck in it!

The tank was made high enough to make viewing easy from a standing position. The stand is just over 1m tall and is made out of Treated Pine and MDF. All areas have a minimum of 3 coats of undercoat and up to 6 coats of high gloss, Ivory White acrylic paint. Piano hinges were used on both the hood door and cabinet doors.

The original setup consisted of an RO NW100 Skimmer which did fit within the Sump! I no longer have that luxury since upgrading to a Turbo Beckett Skimmer which now sits outside the tank.

The sump does however allow plenty of room for Media Filters and Reactors, as well as Refugium with DSB and Algae.

Filtration

Heaps of Live Rock! Lost count but most of the tank is full of rock! There's a 3 chamber sump with the first chamber housing the skimmer pump, then bubble trap, into refugium, into return. A small RO pump feeds the Phosphate Filter, which also supplies the Sulphur Reactor which in turn feeds into the Hydro carbonate Reactor. This has a drip rate of about 2 drips per second. I change the filter media once every 3 months.
